PRATS & SYMINGTON

CRAFTED ACROSS GENERATIONS

In 1882, 19-year-old Scot Andrew James Symington arrived in Porto to work at W & J Graham & Co. In 1891 he married Porto-born Beatriz Atkinson, whose family ties the Symingtons to fourteen generations of Port producers, back to Walter Maynard, who shipped Port in 1652.

Theirs is a story of patience and perseverance. The family weathered depression and war, even selling two treasured Douro vineyards in 1954 to keep the business afloat. The outstanding 1963 Vintage marked a turning point. In 1970 they came full circle, acquiring Graham's, where AJ had begun. A partnership with Bordeaux's Prats family followed in 1999, then Cockburn's in 2006.

Today the fourth and fifth generations work side by side, from vineyard to cellar and almost every part of the business. In 2019, Symington Family Estates became Portugal's first wine producer to achieve B Corporation certification. Their Ports honour the arts of cooperage, ageing and blending, from Vintage Ports declared only in exceptional years to Tawnies nurtured in seasoned oak.

This booklet presents a selection from Graham's, Cockburn's and Prats & Symington, led by the 2024 Vintage Ports, the family's first classic declaration in seven years. Taste, take notes and discover Ports made, as the Symingtons say, for the next generation.

THE 2024 CLASSIC VINTAGE DECLARATION

A RARE DECLARATION

2024 is the family's first classic declaration in seven years. It marked a return to an old-style Douro vintage: moderate temperatures, cool September nights and gradual ripening brought balance and freshness.

Exuberant floral aromas mingle with pure red and black berries, cassis, and subtle liquorice. Concentrated yet refined, the palate is shaped by fresh mineral acidity and structured tannins, capturing the balance, elegance, and distinctive character of this historic Douro estate.

VINTAGE PORT

Made only in exceptional years from the finest lots of a single harvest, Vintage Port is bottled young and evolves for decades in bottle.

"No other fine wine in the world can age in bottle over decades and gain such complexity like a great Vintage Port."

– Charles Symington, 4th-generation Head Winemaker.

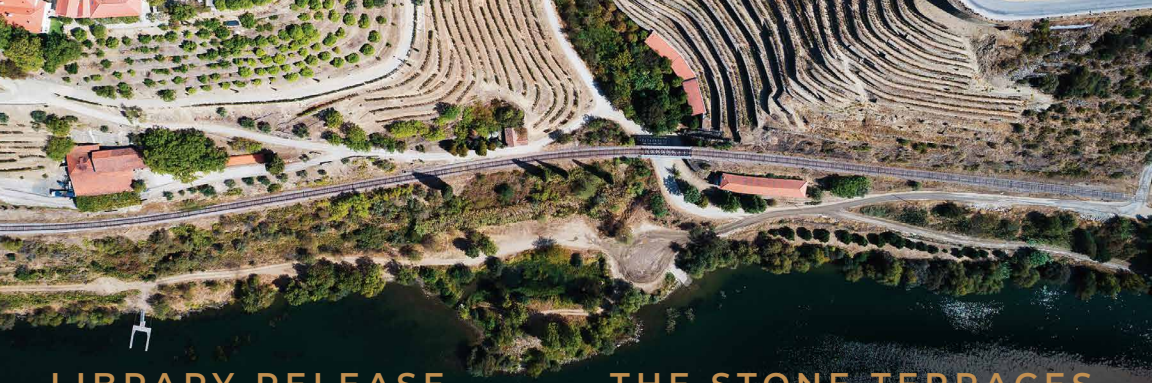
Extraordinarily opulent, intense, and fresh, with unique aromatic complexity and beautifully layered fruit. Concentrated yet balanced, the palate combines Graham's signature richness with freshness, depth, and refined structure, culminating in a powerful, persistent finish.



LIBRARY RELEASE

The Symington family reserves limited quantities of Vintage Port to mature in its own cellars. The Library Release designation identifies these later releases from the family's ageing stocks. Bottles are carefully recorked, and their labels record the years of bottling, re-release and recorking, together with the time spent ageing in bottle.

THE STONE TERRACES

At Quinta dos Malvedos, Graham's principal estate, lie just under three hectares of hand-built schist terraces dating to the late 18th century and rebuilt after phylloxera. Two sheltered vineyards, the east- and west-facing 'Port Arthur' plots and the Vinha dos Cardenhos, ripen slowly as the stone walls hold the day's heat through the night.

THE VALUE OF PATIENCE

Graham's 80 Year Old Tawny was blended by Head Winemaker and Master Blender Charles Symington (4th generation) to mark the 80th birthday of his father and predecessor, Peter Symington (3rd generation). It is built from wines of the 1940s, many dating to the Second World War, aged for decades in seasoned oak casks. Its quality was such that the family chose to bottle it for a limited release
